

ARRESTED.

Thomas M. Turner Held for the Murder of Conway.

The Warrant Sworn Out by Prosecutor Woodson.

Based on Evidence Obtained at the Inquest.

What the Prisoner Has to Say for Himself.

Thomas M. Turner, the dayman last seen in the rear of the premises where the foul murder was committed last week, of which Mrs. Conway and her daughter were the victims, was arrested by Marshal Liggett at 12 o'clock to-day in front of the residence on Eighth street, where he was arrested upon the authority of Major Woodson. Marshal Liggett immediately landed him into his buggy and drove rapidly down to the Second street jail, where he was registered, and turned over to the jailer, who immediately locked him up. On the way to the jail, Turner was seen by only two or three little tips in his evidence which he desired to have corrected. Yesterday the Star published what Turner had told one of the reporters who was his testimony. In this Turner went so far as to acknowledge being upon the premises on business, as late as 1:30 o'clock, and that he was placing himself there at a dangerous time. This alone would look suspicious. Whether or not anything more was elicited from him when before the jury is hard to tell. When Marshal Liggett was asked in regard to the matter, he said in a position to say anything. It might be that nothing has been found which implicates Turner, though it is not known. It is believed, however, that Major Woodson would not take this step at this dangerous period unless he heard something very positive.

It is known that Turner was placed under arrest the day of the murder and was subjected to a very close examination, but he told such a straight story that the police did not feel they were warranted in holding him. He has been watched, however, pending the verdict of the coroner's inquest, and while the examination has been conducted secretly, it is believed that the coroner has been obtained to justify the prosecuting attorney in ordering Turner's arrest.

A STAR reporter called at the Second street jail and asked to interview Turner, who is confined in the new addition on the west side, but was told that Turner had requested that no reporters be allowed near him. The reporter pressed his case, however, and the jailer made a special request for him, but to no purpose, since Turner now says he will neither talk to a reporter nor anyone else who has seen an attorney, Major Warner, Senator Vreese, or some one else.

The Coroner's Inquest Over.
As soon as Turner was arrested the coroner's jury was dismissed and the inquest was brought to a close.

The Coroner's Inquest.
The coroner's inquest at the Conway case still proceeds, but with nothing of a startling character. The coroner is now waiting to ascertain. Everything is being conducted upon the star-chamber principle, and now the witnesses are instructed not to give away their stories. The coroner is now waiting to ascertain upon the star-chamber principle, and now the witnesses are instructed not to give away their stories. The coroner is now waiting to ascertain upon the star-chamber principle, and now the witnesses are instructed not to give away their stories.

When the jury met this morning it was found necessary, on account of the cold weather, to remove the jury to the kitchen, where a fire could be had, the stoves in the other rooms having been taken down, since Mr. Conway is packing his household goods preparatory to leaving for Westport. The first witness called this morning was John Conway, the oldest of the two boys, who works at a restaurant, and was absent from home at the time the murder was committed. He was kept upon the stand for some time, and since he knows nothing about the crime, it was not long before he was questioned extensively upon home matters, about acquaintances of the family, etc. The younger boy, James Conway, who works at O. V. Smith's, was called next, and he, too, being absent from home at the time the murder was committed, was asked the same questions. A subpoena was filed in the hands of the constable for Jos. Finkler, a father who is not the father of the boy, but who reported that he claimed to have passed the house about 12:30 o'clock upon the fatal day, and saw a man run out of the yard, from the passenger side of the car, and dash across the street, going at such a rate that a wagon had to pull up, to allow him to pass that the man ran through the alley upon the opposite side, going south, and that he is expected to say, but it is not known positively that he will tell this story.

Persons who examined the fence, to see if there were any marks of blood, claim that where there were painted spots, one was used a knife and obliterated all traces. Mr. Conway is bearing up as well as might be expected under the trial, and he has now the sincere sympathy of all with whom he has come in contact. The coroner's jury seemed to have a very close examination of the evidence, but whether or not they think they have something in the evidence thus far elicited cannot be told, since they have not yet reached a verdict. Owing to the disagreeable state of the weather, there were not so many about the house as usual this morning. If the jury are thoroughly convinced regarding the evidence thus far already examined the inquest will hardly be concluded before Friday or Saturday. Prosecutor Woodson is still conducting the inquest.

THE WALKUP CASE.

Some Rather Rough Testimony Taken in the Matter To-day—An Unfavorable Record for Deceased.

EXPOSURE, Oct. 28.—The Walkup trial opened by Wm. Jay, guardian of Mrs. Walkup, in depositing that between July 3 and 10 last Mr. Walkup, in his office, took a white powder, saying to him, "I am arsenic."

On cross examination by Stacey the witness said he had not remembered the incident until after the coroner's inquest, or spoken of it in the trial. He said he was in the office, and he was paying the expenses of the suit out of his pocket. He said he did not agree to pay the expenses; he said he was paid his expenses; he said he was paid his expenses; he said he was paid his expenses.

Dr. Graham, associate editor of the Daily Republican, deposed that he was in the office of the deceased before he died; had a conversation with him; and that he was in the office of the deceased before he died; had a conversation with him; and that he was in the office of the deceased before he died; had a conversation with him.

A PERSISTENT SUITOR SHOT DEAD.

The Latest Tennessee Tragedy—A Black Driver Killed for a Quarter—A Boy Deceased His Sister With a Knife—A Texas Stage Robbed—Other Crimes.

Special Telegram to The Star.
NASHVILLE, Oct. 28.—Information has just been received that Dr. John O. Smith killed J. A. Roder, in Dover, Stewart county, by shooting him three times with a pistol. Roder was attempting to force his way into the residence of Mrs. Smith for the purpose of interviewing Mrs. Sallie Smith, a widowed sister-in-law of Smith, when he was fired upon. Roder was instantly infuriated with Mrs. Smith, but was regarded by her with positive abhorrence. He had often sought to thrust himself into the lady's presence and on one occasion with the aid of the lady's maid brought within the pale of the criminal law. Nothing, however, resulted from the threatened prosecution. Despite the repugnance which Mrs. Smith manifested for him, Roder had for years shadowed her and endeavored every pretext to win her favor. He has called upon her at her home and has been so boisterous that the frightened lady has been through the side windows. She came to this city on one occasion in order to avoid him, but he followed her and actually forced his way into the midst of the lady's family. He was then arrested by the police and committed to jail. He was then released and he returned to his home. He was then arrested by the police and committed to jail. He was then released and he returned to his home.

After the Moonshiners.
NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 28.—The situation in Grundy county has become more interesting. United States Marshal Tilman, of this city, to-day complied with the request of leading residents of Tracy City, who asked that men be sent to that section to aid in the suppression of moonshine whiskey and the sale of the same.

Up as he wrote them or not, simply because it took all his spare time off the stage to look over the manuscripts of plays that had been submitted to him. But I think we could arrange it so that he might tonight construct something in that line, which would at least attract the attention of our families. Would you mind telling me how you write a play? You have been in the business considerably, and you could tell me of course some of the salient points about it. Do you write the type-writer or do you dictate your thoughts to a secretary? Do you write the dialogue first? Do you write a play, then dramatize it, or do you write the drama, then play on it? Would it be a good idea to secure a plot that would cover very little and then write the kibish on it, or would you put up the lines first and then the drama on the lines? I have a great many crude ideas, but you see I am not a practical dramatist. One of my crude ideas is to introduce in the play an artist's studio. This would not come high, for we could get one very easily and at slight expense. Then introduce the artist's studio, and the scene. Everybody would be horrified, but they would walk over each other to attend the drama, and we would do well. Our living would be in the drama, and the salary would be a mere trifle. Some think that a star company should be constructed of the same kind and accompanied by a hand organ and a janitor would be a great hit. Think it over.

Special Telegram to The Star.
PALESTINE, Tex., Oct. 28.—Judge T. Chandler, of the well known law firm of Chandler & Schell, of Austin, is now lying at the International hotel, in a critical condition. Mr. Chandler arrived here last night on the 11-55 train, on which he was returning to his home. He had only laid down for a few minutes when he arose and left the hotel, saying he was going to look after his horse which had been left in the stable. The judge was not seen again at the hotel. This morning at the 4 o'clock freight train came within one mile east of Necheville, Tex., the train was stopped by Mr. Chandler lying at the bottom of a deep embankment. On examination they found he was unconscious. Both arms were injured, the left arm being broken and the right arm being fractured. The judge was brought to the city and a further examination by physicians developed the fact that the spine and neck were broken.
